

Hobby

Falco subbuteo

SEASONAL BEHAVIOUR

Comes back late, from late April but most in May. Leaves in September-October. It is one of the latest breeders, the fledglings not flying until August.

DISTRIBUTION

Known to breed in Sierra de Aracena y Picos de Aroche, where there is one certain pair and two possibles. There is also a probable territory in Seville.

COMMENTS

Little is known about this species. It takes over other nests to breed, usually of crow species.

STATUS

Summer visitor (1-5 pairs) and migrant.

ABUNDANCE

Very scarce on passage, rare as breeder.

HABITAT

Seems to prefer a patchwork habitat with woods, Mediterranean scrub and clearings or the edges of pinewoods. On passage might be seen in flight anywhere.
